

Economic Organization with Limited Communication

By ROBERT M. TOWNSEND*

This paper presents formal, stylized representations of communication-accounting systems: oral assignment, portable object, written message, and telecommunication systems are considered. The environments that allow this formalization are characterized by spatial separation, private information, and a need to keep track of past actions, transfers, and shocks.